SECOND FIRING - 2022

"Venice for me is magical and it aligns with one of my main obsessions: light. I want light in all of my work, and the light on the water in the canals makes me absolutely crazy with joy; I could spend the rest of my life sitting looking at it."

SECOND FIRING BY PETER MARINO

Rubelli has assigned a second capsule collection to the multifaceted creativity of the well-known American architect Peter Marino.

After Peter Marino for Venetian Heritage, the three silk jacquards inspired by the water of Venice, it is now the turn of Second Firing, a collection of ten fabrics whose name refers to the firing of ceramics in the kiln.

Peter Marino's muse was his collection of ceramics by Pierre-Adrien Dalpayrat, a French artist/ceramist from the late 19th century, known for his innovative glazes and in particular for having invented an ox-blood red glaze, named after him - the "rouge Dalpayrat".

The multi-coloured vases created by Dalpayrat impress Peter Marino with the mix of colours in the glazes, but also with their modernity. He commented on the artist's work: "The abstractions of his shapes and intermixed glazes look modern even today".

In the Second Firing collection, it is as if Peter Marino were retracing the creative process of the ceramic artist by acting as an alchemist and transferring the flamed finishes and textural effect of Dalpayrat's vases onto the fabric - the alchemy of the furnace repeated on the loom.

The magic of the furnace is in fact counterpointed by the magic of weaving, which comes from the complex intersecting of warp and weft threads and which in Second Firing gives life to an explosive colour mix. Peter Marino describes it as "dazzling chromatic waterfalls" in a comment on Dalpayrat ceramics.

The ten fabrics in the new capsule collection are unique of their kind. Suitable for decoration and upholstery, they are made from eco-nylon in the warp and cotton in the weft. To highlight the shiny effect of the ceramic glazes, metallic weaves have also been added in some variants.

In Acqua Luminosa and Acqua Profonda the theme of water, which Peter Marino expressed with great skill in the previous capsule collection for Rubelli, returns in the pattern and colours.

30520-1 Dalpayrat Glaze

A joyful mix of Dalpayrat ceramics colours and textures.

Venice and its lagoon is clearly evident in Dalpayrat Blue, in Dalpayrat Glaze and Dalpayrat Green.

30523-4 Apoteosi Di Venezia

The reference to Veronese's paintings is particularly evident in Apoteosi di Venezia (cf. the colours of the painting of the same name), in Blue Tiger (inspired by the colours of "The Finding of Moses") and in Green Tiger (in which the green is that of the painting "Lucrezia").

30524-5 Blue Tiger

In Riflessi di Luce and Riflessi Scuri the luminosity of the gold and bronze metallic weaves creates two sophisticated and rich lampas.

RUBELLI

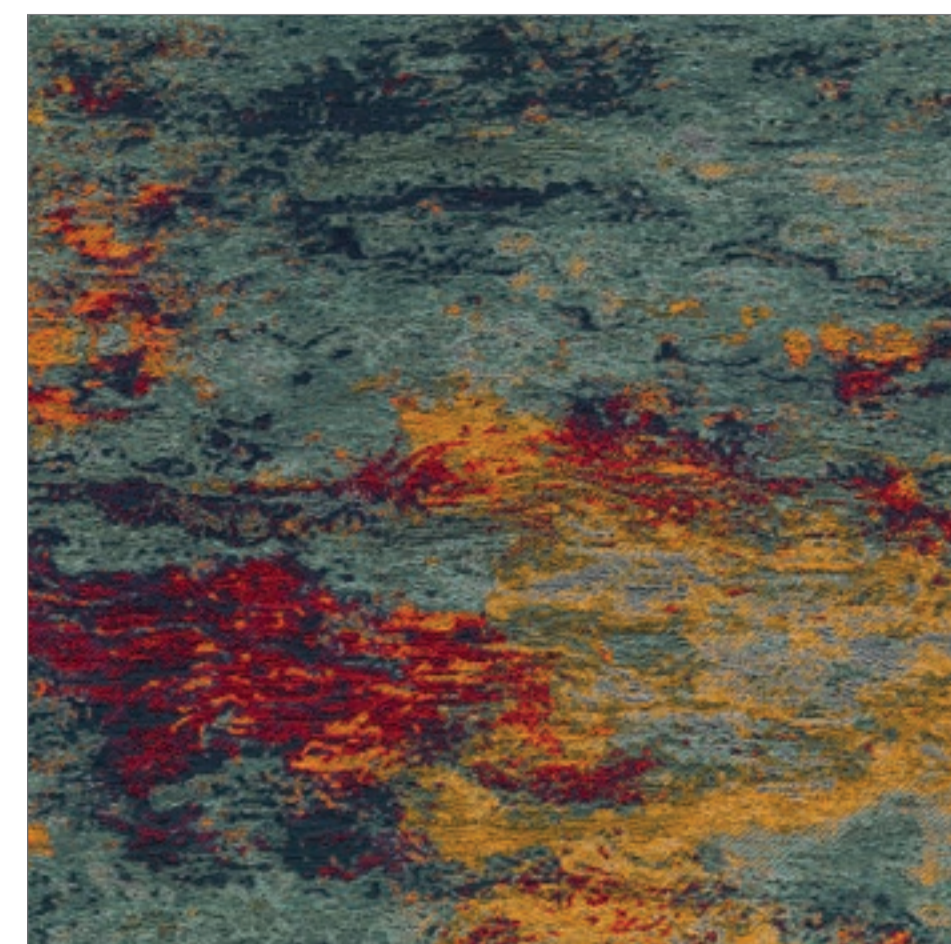

The ten fabrics in the new capsule collection are unique of their kind.

A true alchemy of art which underlines to what extent Art is for Peter Marino an essential element of his creative work.
